Pleasanton-COVA agreement

Council to discuss terms

PLEASANTON — Pleasanton may not vote to pull out of the Congress of Valley Agencies Monday night but it appears clear they may insist on some substantial changes in that organization in exchange for their continued participation.

In a straw vote of the council taken Friday afternoon, the majority expressed a willingness to remain in COVA but indicated equally as strongly that land use matters within municipal jurisdictions are none of COVA's business.

Although the city's refusal to allow COVA achance to review its regional shopping center plans is the focus of the controversy, there is a philosophical rift that goes much deeper.

At least somp members of the Pleasanton council see COVA as an organization that is intrinsically opposed to anything the city tires to do and, therefore, is another stumbling block in an endless list the city feels it already must cope with.

RcLain and Bill Herlihy, the city's two representatives to the valley organization, will recommend the council withdraw from COVA unless some major changes are made in the joint powers agreement and by-laws by which the organization is run.

McLain said those by-laws must be drawn much more "specifically" so it is clear that land use decisions made by a city are not part of COVA's jurisdiction.

Herlihy agreed with that view and added, despite the current controversy, he still "wholeheartedly supports COVA. I think it can have a good and important role in the valley."

Councilman Bob Philcox said he would be "reluctant" to pull out of the roganization but added, "I don't think COVA has any business is land use planning matters."

Philcox also expressed concern that a decision to allow COVA to review the shopping center plans could be precedent-setting and the agency would then consider it permissible to review other land use decisions made by the council.

Councilwoman Joyce LeClaire said she would like to continue the city's participation because it provides a "forum." And, she added, "the issues that affect Pleasanton will come up (in COVA) whether Pleasanton participates or not."

LeClaire added, however, she agrees with the council consensus on the land use issue. "I don't feel it is necessary to get into land use." she said, noting that numerous other regional agencies already study such matters.

"It's redundant for COVA to also study them and only causes further delays." Besides, she added, the hearings that have been held on the regional shopping center "are a matter of public record."

LeClaire, however, was the only membpr of the council who said she did not believe it would be worth it to pull out of COVA over the land use issue.

Mayor Ed Kinney called COVA a "waste of taxpayers' money" and said, even though the city only pays $2,100 towards it operation, "on a cost effectiveness basis, it just isn't hacking it."

He added he thinks the "council would like to keep the doors of communication open" but he would "not be at all surprised to hear a recommendation for withdrawal Monday night."

Hillside law, signal top Pleasanton agenda

PLEASANTON — The city council is expected to adopt the long-awaited hillside ordinance and to take the first steps toward installation of a much-needed traffic signal at Hopyard Road and Johnson Industrial Drive Monday night.

The hillside ordinance will provide for a "hillside planned development district" which will be placed on property with more than a 10 percent slope.

City officials hope the ordinance will encourage an alternative to conventional flat land development practices in hill areas, help regulate density and aid in preservation of predominant views both from and of the hill areas.

The council is expected to approve a proposal by TJKM Engineers to design a signal program for the Hopyard-Johnson Industrial Drive intersection.

The city has budgedted $60,000 for the complicated signal which should be completed by the end of March, according to Traffic EngineerKen Lamb.

That interspction is number one on the city's priority schedule. An average 25,000 cars a day use the intersection and the area has been the scene of 36 accidents since 1970, in which 17 people have been injured.

The council will also consider an appeal filed by the owners of the Pleasanton Body Shop who are protesting the fact they will be prohibited from using Vervais Avenue as an egress for their commercial service facility at 4262 Stanley Blvd.

Staff believes there is sufficient room to provide both ingress and egress onto Stanley Boulevard and, since the Vervais Avenue exit is unnecessary, "we can see no good reason to unnecessarily inconvenience the residents presently living on that street (Vervais)."

Other items on the agenda include Frank Auf der Maur's application to prezone three acres at 3482 Stanley Blvd. to commercial service; a report from the planning commission rpgarding its goals and objectives for the 1975-76 fiscal year; and a report concerning increased insurance premiums.

The council will meet at 8 p.m. Monday in the Pleasanton Justice Court, 30 West Angela St. Preceding the meeting, the Pleasanton Redevelopment Agency will meet at 7:30 p.m. and the Alameda-Contra Costa Medical Association will make a presentation regarding blood donor participation at 7:45 p.m.

Hospital employe attacked

LIVERMORE — A man pretending to be deaf and dumb attempted to rape a Valley Memorial Hospital employe early Thursday morning after luring her into the parking lot on the pretext of helping someone in a car.

The victim told police she started to lead the man to the emergency ward after he came in shotly before 4 a.m. He was motioning with his hands, she said, as if he were dumb, and nodded when she suggested the emergency ward.

As they were walking down the hallway the suspect tapped the woman on the shoulder and motioned toward the north door.

Thinking someone sick was in a car in the parking lot, the woman followed the man. He kept pointing to a car in the west lot, she continued, as she tried to tell him the emergency ward was around the corner.

He suddenly grabbed her around the throat and dragged her through the lot while she screamed and fought violently.

"Don't scream or I'll hurt you," the supposedly dumb man said.

A Tri-Valley Ambulance approaching the hospital with sirens at full blast scared the suspect, who fled west from the hospital.

Livermore considers rezoning

LIVERMORE — The city council will hold a public hearing Monday on rezoning certain properties to Open Space-Urban Reserve (OS-UR) designations.

The public hearing will top the regular council meeting which begins at 8 p.m. in the Municipal Court Chambers, 39 S. Livermore Ave.

Other business matters scheduled for consideration are an appeal by the subcontracting firm of Foxx-Lynn Corporation of the city's decision to deny acceptance of its services for Fire Station No. 1 and preparation of a lease for the corner of Portola Avenue and Murrieta Boulevard for beautification purposes.

A report of proposed Alameda County supervisorial redistricting also will be presented.

Amador trustees to act on budget

Amador Valley Joint High School District trustees will act on adoption of a $7.7 million publication budget at their Tuesday meeting.

Board members convene at 7:30 p.m. in the District Educational Center board room.

Adoption of the 1975-76 publication budget is the last step before a public hearing on the ledger. The process begins with adoption of a preliminary budget followed by a tentative budget.

Trustees are also scheduled to adopt the classified salary schedule for 1975-76.

The board will hear a report from the Campus Smoking Legislation panel, hold a public hearing on out of district tuition, approve distribution of uncommitted bond funds and execute an agreement with the chief project representative for Regional Occupational Program buildings.

Bids will be advertised for on rigging and lighting at the Amador auditorium, turf and sprinklers, gymnasium bleachers and classroom furniture and equipment at Foothill High and paving of a parking lot at Amador.

Fair's top livestock

The annual Junior Livestock Auction today at the Alameda County Fair in Pleasanton will find 399 animals going up for sale. This year's auction concludes a week of intense competition before judges. Seventy-four hogs will be sold, beginning at 9:30 a.m. in the livestock area. Resuming the sale at 1 p.m., 66 market steers will be sold. At about 2 p.m., 259 market sheep will conclude the sale. Above, Fred Allison of the Crane Ridge 4-H in Livermore exhibits his 4-H market beef champion. Dave Correia of Livermore FFA had the market sheep champion.

Historic church relocation

Detailed plans, safeguards being formulated

PLEASANTON — The Building Committee of the United Presbyterian Community Church on Neal Street is in full swing on a study aimed at relocation of that building and the church social hall.

Following a meeting of the congregation on June 15 when members voted in favor of moving the historical landmark from the 100 Neal Street location to a site on Mirador Drive, a new committee was also elected to go into an extensive study of moving the structure and the safety factor of the church during that move.

The committee, with Jim Hagaman as its chairman, met on June 25 to begin their task of compiling facts and figures. An engineer was called in to give "structural advice" as to what would have to be done to the building to meet the city code and if any harm would come to the church during the transfer.

The panel is also working with architectural firms to secure competitive bids. "The biggest problem," said Hagaman, "is getting cost estimates."

Although members of the church have given their approval to move the building and it is "just a matter of how and when," the committee will present the final plans to the congregation, hopefully on Sept. 14 to get their approval once again.

If the final plans are satisfactory to the congregation, steps will also be taken at this meeting toward a fund raising campaign.

The financial picture of the Community church is a fairly good one Hagaman advised. The property and educational building on Mirador Drive, both buildings and property on Neal Street are paid for. A financial obligation of possibly three years on the present project is hoped for.

According to Hagaman, the only problems that could possibly stop moving the church would be if costs turn out to be prohibitive or that the structure is such that it can't be made strong enough to be moved.

Public reaction so far has been positive Hagaman contends. "There was a petition circulated which indicated people did not want the church moved, but it was not a negative type of a petition. It was more of a plea to leave the church at its present site as there seemed to be concern as to the future development on the property." Only 43 signatures were on the petition.

Hagaman further commented that he and his working crew took spot checks in the neighborhood of Mirador Drive where the church will be relocated and found no one against the idea. Most felt it was, "just great," according to Hagaman.

The plans the committee are studying as far as the actual layout of the church and parking are: the entrance will be to the right of the educational building with a one way drive that circles the entire property. Parking will be diagonal around the drive. The center area will be landscaped. The committee, although not sure until they meet with the city as to how many parking spaces will be required, does not anticipate any problem. "There is adequate space for parking," Hagaman commented, "it will be just the matter of planning it out and working with the city."

At this point, the committee is aware that the building will have to be brought up to code, additional support in the roofing will be required and the wall structure will have to be improved. According to Hagaman these changes can be accomplished fairly easily.

A total seating capacity is being planned for approximately 350 to 400. The edifice now has a capacity of 250. Membership with the church is 804 members. The church presently holds two services in the winter to accommodate the members and only one in the summer.

Plans for extending the church are not definite, however consideration is being given to cutting the church in the center to enlarge it rather than knocking out one of the walls and extending it from the end of the building. The main point being considered to the expansion is the fact that the committee does not want to lose the architectural design by making the structure out of proportion.

Plans are to increase the size of the social hall as well, but as to how large will be determined later.

The chairman is pleased the way the men are progressing with the project. "We are taking everything step by step in a professional way," he commented, "everything is well planned. The next meeting for the Building Committee is scheduled for July 28.

A study of expanding the facilities of the United Presbyterian Church has been in progress for the last several years. When it became evident that costs would prevent the building of a new church, the members of the congregation asked the Building Committee to investigate the possibility of moving the present church to the Mirador site.

A primilary study was made and then informative meetings for the congregation were held before the voting took place to see if the members were in agreement for moving the church.

It is hoped moving the building can begin shortly after the September meeting if all meets with approval. Other facilities will be used while the church is being moved and expanded. Weather permitting, the amphitheater on the Mirador site will be used.

New Bicentennial coins now available in valley

Valley residents can go "shopping" tomorrow for a dazzling new memento to the nation's birthday: a Bicentennial half-dollar.

It's the first of three silvery (but not silver) coins the U.S. Treasury Department is issuing this year, and it will be available in most Valley banks by the end of the week. Many banks have already received their shipments of $500 or $1,000 worth of the halves.

Bank of America is one of the establishments limiting purchasers to 10 coins at a time, or $5 worth. They sell for face value and are completely spendable.

On the face of the new coin is the familiar profile of the late John F. Kennedy, with "1776 — 1976" printed under the likeness.

On the reverse is a detailed drawing of Independence Hall, Philadelphia, with "200 years of freedom" printed to the left and the country's slogan, "e pluribus unum" (from many, one) to the right. Thirteen tiny stars form a curve at the bottom of the coin over the words "Half Dollar."

The coins are meant to be circulated, not to be stashed away as novelties, although doubtless many of them will end up in jewelry boxes or the backs of dresser drawers as mementoes. According to Bob Schneider, proprietor of Bob's Coins in Livermore, some 400 million of the halves were minted in Denver — enough for every American to keep two.

Bob says there will be no scarcity of the coins. He's giving them away, in fact (to the purchasers of the first 100 U.S. coin guidebooks for 1976.)

What there is a limited number of, he says, is the $12 silver half which was minted in San Francisco earlier this year and was sent to collectors only by special order.

The coins available to the general public are three-quarters copper by weight and one-quarter nickel and weigh 11.34 grams. The silver coins are slightly heavier.

At some point during the year — the date has not been announced — the Treasury will also issue a Bicentennial "silver" dollar and quarter. The quarter will probably have a picture of the famous drummer-boy figure on the reverse.

Oddly enough, manufacture of the unusual quarter "may prove chaotic" to the U.S. economy, some fear.

According to a recent issue of "Coin World", a hobby newspaper, "many may think they are counterfeit or a novelty item" because of the design and refuse to use them.

The same thing could hold true for the halves and dollars, but their use is not a key part of the economic system.

Taxpayers for Incorporation

SRV area may become Mt. Diablo City

By CATHY TALLYN

DANVILLE — The group organized to form a property tax free city in the San Ramon Valley now has a name for itself and the proposed city.

The steering committee of the Taxpayers for Incorporation will recommend July 28 the proposed city be called Mt. Diablo.

It would take in much of the area served by the San Ramon Valley Unified School District.

Ken Frank of the group stressed the name is only a suggestion and the final decision won't be made until this fall.

The committee has also selected officers for the group.

Don Sledge will serve as chairman, Beverly Lane, vice chairman and Norman Roberts, finance chairman.

The Taxpayers for Incorporation consists of a handful of residents of the San Ramon Valley.

However, Frank said, the group foresees no problem expanding.

He said the group thinks a city could be formed taking in Alamo, San Ramon and Danville and require no property tax to provide the same level of services the valley gets from the county.

"Because of a new law, you have to say on the ballot what the maximum property tax will be on the ballot.

"If we say there's no property tax we can't have one without a vote of the people," he explained.

One of the main functions of the group in the next two months will be to gather material to see if it's feasible to have a property tax free city.

Frank said they hope to be able to present their findings to the Local Agency Formation Commission in October.

"By Oct. 1 we hope to have the study package completed."

July 28 the informally organized steering group will have a meeting to present its ideas to the community.

No time or place has been set yet for the meeting.

They will also ask for people to work on research and publicity.

Area chairmen are also needed.

"We'll need lots of volunteers.

"We've got to look at the revenues the city would get, expenditures an the effect it would have on existing special service districts," Frank said.

County service districts exist to provide such services as police,recreation and street lighting.

The various sections of the San Ramon Valley pay different tax rates based on what special service districts they live in.

If a city is approved by voters in November 1976, the council would have to decide whether to dissolve the services provided by the districts.

"I think the service districts could remain exactly as they are," Frank said.

Residents would continue to pay the tax they did before but instead of the county collecting it, the city would.

The group plans to write to the many citizens groups in the area to inform them of their plans.

"We'll tell them we're considering incorporation and ask if they'd like to participate," Frank said.

"It will be a very difficult campaign.

"But we wouldn't go through with it if we didn't think we could succeed."

Frank thinks their task will mainly be education.

"People just aren't educated to cities," he said.

He explained many people automatically think of metropolitan cities such as San Francisco when cityhood is mentioned.

"People don't realize they might be able to have a city without a property tax.

"If most people understood what (cityhood meant) I think we'd have a 90 per cent yes vote," he said.

Livermore's transportation element

Council, planning members attack plan

LIVERMORE — A joint meeting of the city council and planning commissioners Thursday night attacked sections of the Transportation Element and then released newly-completed Air Quality and Land Use Elements for eventual inclusion into the general plan.

Mayor Archer Futch presided over the meeting, which included council members Don Miller and Helen Tirsell, planning commissioners Bob Selden and Candy Simonen, City Manager Bill Parness, Planning Director George Musso, and Don Crawford and Bruce O'Neal of Grunwald, Crawford and Associates.

The Transportation Element, released at an earlier meeting, was criticized for its dependence on a select system of streets in future planning considerations.

Instead, major and collector streets should be used in a systemical fashion to determine planning for the future, council members said.

A "flexible" rather than a dial-a-ride bus system should be implemented, Futch said, because dial-a-ride is not realistic in economic terms over the long run.

Disappointment was expressed over the lack of a more intensive system of bike lanes and trails, but failure to win approval for bike lanes on overpasses limits two-wheel vehicle access to critical areas.

The coming of Bay Area Rapid Transit (BART) was generally considered too far away for serious study. "We can't depend on a fixed-rail system in the immediate future," said Futch.

Although median strips are being set aside for BART on I-580, the feeling was that 10-30 years could elapse before the system comes to the Valley.

The just-released Air Quality Element states that "The Livermore-Amador Valley has recorded the highest levels of any area within the San Francisco Bay Area."

Federal law dictates that oxidant levels of .08 parts per million (ppm) is not to be exceeded for a period of one hour more than once annually. This limit was exceeded for "for at least one hour between 188 days per year and 40 days per year over the period 1969 - 1973," the report said.

Emissions from the Bay Area, once considered a major source of Valley pollution, was downgraded to 30 per cent on the average in the current report. "Future Bay Area contributions can be expected to be even less as population within the Valley increases," the report said.

The study concludes that:

regardless of population level, the oxidant level in the Valley will continue to exceed federal air quality standards;

assuming meteorological conditions at their worst, there is virtually no chance of meeting state or federal standards for oxidant levels in the foreseable future, regardless of the effectiveness of proposed auto emission controls;

assuming intermediate meteorological conditions, all projected federal emmission controls and lowest population condition, oxidant levels in major portions of the planning area will exceed by double the federal standards; given the intermediate meteorological conditions and current auto emission controls, the oxidant level over the entire central portion of the planning area will be two to five times higher than the federal standard.

Even after 1990, oxidant levels are expected to increase even if all emission controls are effected and the population undergoes only modest expansion.

"Any hope of reducing the level of emissions will depend upon attacking the problem on a broad front," the report said in its summary.

This "attack plan" includes enforcement of more strict auto emission controls, a slower growth rate, greater dependence upon bicycles and walking, a substantial increase in the use of regional and local transit systems, new job opportunities for local residents, and, ultimately, replacement of the internal combustion engine.

The Land Use element states that only 16 per cent of land within the Adjusted Planning Area (not including the present urban area) is "reasonably suitable for urban expansion on the basis of physical conditions."

If space were the only criteria, sizeable growth could be accommodated in the Valley, the report states. It is one of the few remaining areas of potential growth "wherein urban management can be provided by existing municipal government."

Of the urban developed area, 50 per cent is residential, 22 per cent consists of streets, and 18 per cent is devoted to public uses.

The report states that it is imperative the business community "seek its own identity as a community shopping and service center" through timely development of the central business district. Livermore may lose business to the proposed regional shopping center in Pleasanton, because the Valley is only big enough for one shopping center.

Recommendations include reduction of sprawl, preservation of environmental setting, protection of scenic quality, reduction of the commuting level, mitigating the air quality problem, improving land use efficiency, increasing job opportunities for Valley residents, and improvement in the local tax base.

Churches in Dublin keep keep pace with population

Dublin's rapid and persistent growth over the past 15 years has not caught churches by surprise.

At present, a Dublin resident will find it easier to care for his soul than to care for his body, and almost every church in the area has plans for expansion.

Though no churches existed in the Dublin area prior to 1960, there are now eight thriving congregations with over 4,000 members, which works out to one place of worship for every 1,875 residents.

On the other hand, there is only one doctor for every 2,045 residents in need of general medical assistance, so Dublin's soul appears to be in better hands than its health.

Typical of the growth pattern of Dublin's churches, the Parkway Baptist Church started out as a mission in 1962, meeting in the old Murray School along Dublin Boulevard.

Reverend Max Hively now ministers to a congregation of 253 residents in a church established in 1968. A new $95,000 building is under construction that eventually may house a 14-room Christian kindergarten.

St. Raymond's Catholic Church was founded in 1961 with less than 100 members. Now over 1,400 families are involved in the parish and approximately 2,000 worshipers attend five masses over each weekend.

Originally, the congregation met in a building on Camp Parks land, but a multipurpose building went up in 1966. Monsignor Bernard Moran and his assistants are planning to expand "within the next six months".

The John Knox United Presbyterian Church held its first meetings on a volleyball court of a private home with around 40 members.

Now Pastor Jim Griffes and his 355 Presbyterians meet on Amarillo Road, and a brand new Christian Education Building was completed last October.

Until 1964, they met in the old Murray School, which apparently was a popular religious gathering place in Dublin's early days.

St. Philip Lutheran Church also began with about 40 members in 1963, and now Pastor Sergei Koberg has a flock of 400 baptized and 250 confirmed Dublin residents.

As far as expansion goes, "We're involved in planning committees now" said Pastor Koberg.

The Valley Christian Center started up in 1965 with less than 50 members and now draws between 500 and 600 each Sunday, according to Pastor Ward Tanneberg.

He and three assistant pastors have "most definite" plans for expansion their over 200 members continue to draw more converts.

All in all, the religious picture in Dublin is most promising, as all the churches surveyed are in the process of expanding.

Despite its rapid economic growth, the community of Dublin has still managed to watch out for its spirtual prosperity as well.

Livermore Bicentennial Organization

Plans grow, vary for historic valley celebration

Livermore Bicentennial Organization chairpersons Ralph Condit, Fran Samans and Gib Marguth have scheduled two workshops to prepare for the nation's 200th anniversary. (Times Photo)

Two idea workshops slated to gather data, set stage

LIVERMORE - Interested groups and individuals are invited and encouraged to attend two Livermore Bicentennial Organization (LBO) workshops in preparation of the community's observance of the nation's 200th anniversary.

The workshops are scheduled for the Thursdays of July 17 and 24 from 7 to 9:45 p.m. in the student union building of Livermore High School.

LBO plans to observe the Bicentennial with attention focused on the country's past through its "Heritage '76" program; the present, "Festival '76," and the future, "Horizons '76."

The purpose of the workshops is threefold: to make available to participants the thinking and planning which has evolved during the past six months; solicit ideas and learn about others' interests, and jointly propose a program for the coming year.

During the July 17 workshop, LBO will review proposed national, state, county and Livermore plans, including information on available services, project ideas and organizational facilities.

Participants then will divide up into small discussion groups and brainstorm. The entire group will reconvene to list ideas and proposals.

During the week between workshops, attendees will check out ideas with their friends, organizations and neighbors.

On July 24, reports from workshop members will be presented and again participants will divide into small discussion groups, this time to consider the reports.

The groups will reconvene and synthesize conclusions into a tentative plan for Livermore's Bicentennial Celebration.

Group brainstorming sessions during the first workshop will discuss Heritage '76 projects; Festival '76 and birthday party; Horizons '76 and civic pride projects; patriotic observance ideas; Century 111 preparations; adult education programs, and religious and music programs.

Gib Marguth, LBO chairman and Ralph Condit and Fran Samans, research committee and workshop co-chairpersons, presented some of the ideas proposed for the above-listed projects.

Many of the Heritage and Festival '76 projects are formulated but need organizations to carry them out and/or improve on them. A Civic Recognition Week is planned by LBO as a civic pride project but just who to honor remains to be decided. Under consideration are Livermoreans of the past and present who have contributed to both their community and the nation.

A day of celebration — Memorial Day or perhaps Veterans' Day — starting out with a sunrise service at the Veterans Hospital has been suggested as a patriotic observance idea. These kinds of ideas must be clearly defined, the LBO committee members explained.

Under the adult education programs, schools can obtain federal funds for Bicentennial classes. (Some examples would be sewing classes to recreate the fashions of the mid-18th century and panel discussions on such topics as the history of the valley.

The classes in turn could generate speakers to conduct similar sessions to regular students and thus would be resource pools for the community to tap.

Church and school groups are expected to participate in the religious and music programs of the Bicentennial celebration.

Formation of a town committee to hold weekly discussions (52 topics can be supplied by the federal government) has been proposed as part of the Century 111 project, which is a forward-looking program.

Horizons '76 and civic pride projects are designed to last for either six, 10 or 13 years in the future. LBO has proposed to the city an ambitious parkways system for this category and this area may well lead to another separate workshop. Also proposed is the planting of grass and trees at the Civic Center site.

"The observance of the Bicentennial is not a national fair-type of thing. It's a grass roots activity. What happens across the nation is a sum of each town's observance," commented Condit.

Community-wide support, participation sought by anniversary unit leadership

An historic cross-country ride, costumes recalling the days of yore, tickets for a dazzling aboard-train display of American history, music and a flag pageant are among items being worked on by members of the Livermore Bicentennial Organization.

At their meeting Wednesday night at the Livermore Education Center on Las Positas, the committee heard Research Committee chairman Ralph Condit detail plans for a community-wide meeting July 17 of all residents working on Bicentennial projects and of those who may be only considering joining in.

The LBO WORK workshop will meet at 7 p.m. for registration and 7:30 for the session at Livermore High School. The public is invited to contribute ideas for Livermore's celebration of the nation's 200th birthday.

"We hope to bring together all the people who may work on the Bicentennial throughout he year ahead, if not on immediate projects," Condit said. He is being assisted in organizing the session by Fran Samans.

LBO co-chairmen Gib and Marge Marguth announced and had approved the selection of Richard and Pat Corallo as co-chairmen of the Administrative Committee. They replace Chet Fankhauser, who cited the press of business in submitting his resignation.

The Ways and Means Committee is considering the suggestions of other committees in obtaining estimates for the possible printing of Bicenttennial bumper strips, printing LBO stationery and envelopes for the use of residents, and in seeking a Valley outlet for admission tickets to the U.S. Bicentennial display housed in a special train.

The 22-car train, which will enable 1,600 persons per hour to view the exhibit via a moving walkway, is to visit in the Bay Area in San Francisco and Oakland.

Also in the works, with a September publication date the goal, is a special brochure describing Bicentennial events for the coming year and the purpose of each type of celebration — Festival '76, Horizons '76 and Heritage '76. The committee intends to distribute copies of the brochure to each Livermore household, through either a mass mailing or by making the brochures readily available at a number of public buildings and much-frequented businesses.

Barry Schrader, director of Livermore's major role in the April 4, 1976 re-enactment of the 1776 Anza Expedition which culminated in the founding of San Francisco, said the preliminary plans are developing well. The California Highway Patrol is working with both the Alameda and Contra Costa county Bicentennial committees, the individual city committees and the Alameda Sheriff's Mounted Posse in mapping a safe route which will be as true as possible to the actual route taken by the Spanish expeditionary force, he said.

A site on the outskirts of Livermore will be set aside for the placement of a permanent monument commemorating the expedition. And a De Anza College instructor is now designing a marker for that monument.

Also in the Heritage '76 category, Mercedes Snyder was authorized by the LBO to spend up to $50 for patterns of pioneer-style clothes for men, women and children. The committee said it hopes Livermore residents will join in the spirit of the city's past by wearing early-day costumes.

It was suggested, too, that the patterns be made readily available and that perhaps sewing classes be offered students and adults interested in making their own costumes.

Livermore residents Mr. and Mrs. Harold Gabriel are to receive local help in kicking off the prairie Schooner cross-country journey which is to be one the major national events of the Bicentennial celebration. Details of the journey, which is to begin this August and conclude in July, 1976, will be forthcoming the committee said.

Hugh Ellsaesser reported the LBO treasury has been considerably bolstered by recent fund-raising projects. While all the receipts are not yet in, he noted, the treasury total is estimated at between $1,100 and $1,200. Just four months ago, the total was about $55.

Ellsaesser cited the sale of 78 pounds of hot dogs at the 4th of July program at May Nissen Park, the co-sponsorship with the Hayward Concert Association June 27 of a classical guitar concert by George Sakellariou, and the sale of Bicentennial flags by Susan Junk as the primary reasons for the recent treasury additions.

Heritage chairwoman Janet Newton said her booklet on the Anza Expedition will be printed soon and then immediately available for sale. Noting a number of other projects under way in cooperation with the Livermore Heritage Guild, Mrs. Newton reported the May School restoration project is proceeding well but that volunteers to help put the old one-room schoolhouse back in its original shape are always welcome.

LBO chairman Marguth commended all those members who have been working especially hard on committee projects.

As the evening's special presentation, Charlotte Severin of the Pleasanton Bicentennial Organization showed slides and narrated the flag ceremony presented at Pleasanton schools.

The pageant dramatizes the history of the 32 principal flags flown over America from that used by the Norsemen in 1003 to the present day 50-star national banner. Mrs. Severin suggested the cities of Livermore, Dublin and Pleasanton might join together in purcasing a set of the flags for use throughout the Valley.

The guest speaker also displayed bonnets made by Pleasanton senior citizens, and reviewed Pleasanton's Bicentennial Activities.

Mrs. Severin invited area residents to join the Valley Bicentennial Concert Band, which meets Tuesday nights from 7:30 to 10 in the band room of Amador High School. The band will have its first performence July 20 at 1 p.m. during the dedication of Century House on San Ramon Boulevard, Pleasanton.

The mass appeal of photography, and the progressively higher standards of the art through sophisticated equipment, have been ably demonstrated at the photographic exhibition at the County Fair, which concludes today.

According to department head Marilyn Murphy, entries this year and the variety of subjects captured by the camera lens far exceed any previous year.

At the Fair's prejudging, the following photographic exhibits fron the valley won awards:

Nature— Myron Hensinkveld, Livermore, "Out to Sea"; Color prints— Lynn Kelly, Livermore, "Portals"; Professional division, color prints— Robert Philis, Pleasanton, 2nd, "Three Little Angels'; David Proffitt, Livermore, 3rd, "Livermore Valley in Summer"; Kenneth Way, Livermore, honorable mention, "Black Windows Prey" and "Tulleys."

Amateur division, color slides— Ruby McClintic, Oakland, "The Race"; Professional division, monochromatic prints— Janet Way, San Jose, "A Walk in Yosemite." The poultry section of the Fair again drew great interest, both from casual spectators and in number of entries for competition. Jack Bulette was department head. The following valley entries won awards:

American breeds, Plymouth Rock (no variety differential) (barred), Mrs. Ben York, Pleasanton, Best of Variety-Hen, Best Opposite Variety-Cock and Best of Breed-Hen.

English couple turned the American Dream into reality

life style

An early start on the day is part of Gerarda Stocking's business as she prepares to open her bake shop.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a series of articles about immigrant families who have proven that the American free enterprise system still works, that is, if you're willing to work.

By REINA WHITNEY

While most housewives are turning over for their last snooze of the morning Gerarda Stocking of San Ramon has probably already decorated a dozen cakes, made a batch of cookies, loaded her specially equipped station wagon with racks of danish pastries for delivery from her Livermore bakery to her Dublin outlet; all before nine in the morning.

Less than four years ago, she and her husband, Barney, knew absolutely nothing about the bakery business. Through hard work, unswerving perseverance and sometimes crushing frustration, this young couple has turned a dream into reality.

Gerarda met Barney Stocking in London, England, where they were married nine years ago. She was attending The American College in Paris, studying to be an artist, while he was earning his physics degree at the University of London.

During their courtship, Gerarda fell among storings into a family business which would offer more future security. To prepare themselves for this eventuality, they both enrolled in management courses at Diablo Valley College, with an eye at restaurant management.

Their first interest was in opening a typical Cornish pasties shop, where meat pies of all kinds would be sold with wine and beer. They couldn't find a suitable location, and it was while they were speculating on this plan that they happened to spot an ad in a local paper listing the Stinnett's bakery in Livermore for sale. They bought it having no more experience in the bakery business than Gerarda's love of baking.

Mrs. Stinnett gave Gerarda a few lessons on cake decorating, showed Barney how to run the equipment, left recipes for bulk baking and wished them well.

Soon after plunging into their new vocation, Barney was layed off his job, so they both knew much depended on the success of their new venture.

As she reflects back on that time now, she says, "I wouldn't do it over again, but I'm happy now that we sawit through." That nirs month was a nightmare. They never once saw their children. Gerarda and Barney were up at two in the morning and worked until eight in the evening. By this time one of Barney's younger brothers, Ben, was living with them and helping to care for the children with the help of a baby-sitter.

One day she was so frustrated and tired that she complained to a customer who had come in for a cup of coffee, while on his way to a fishing trip. He revealed to her that he had been a baker for 30 years and knew just how she felt.

Practically in tears she asked him if he could possibly make some white cake batter. He decided to give her a hand, and is still there, three and half years later. His name is Bob Montano and she says he was truly an answer to a prayer. Now Bob is a partner in the Stocking's Bakery, and is responsible for the delicious danish pastries they sell.

With that kind of help Barney was able to go back to work in the physics profession for which he was trained.He is now a senior research engineer for Lockheed Missiles and Space Corp. Gerarda capably manages the Livermore bakery and and their other outlet located in Liberty House, Dublin.

Her early artistic training is evident in the beautiful cakes displayed in her cases. Her favorites are the Raggedy Ann and Snoopy cakes which she so expertly decorates. She averages between ten to thirty cakes a day. This weekend she must deliver nine wedding cakes — no small undertaking.

They both love their adopted country and are now United States citizens. Besides sponsoring Barney's brother, Ben, they also sponsored another brother, Joe, and his wife, Pat. They are all striving to make their contribution. Ben is employed by Alcosta Realty while studying for his degree in Sociology, while Joe is a teacher at De La Salle High School, Concord.

They are all interested in running. Joe helps as a track coach at the Concord school. His wife, Pat, a former Olympic runner, coaches women's track at the University of California at Berkeley. They have all had a hand at one time or other in helping at the bakery. Gerarda and Barney run at least two or three miles every night. She says laughingly, "We need to do something to run off all those pastries."

Barney is with the AAU marathon racers which number about 400 in the bay area. Most recently he ran with the group in a 26 mile race in Livermore.

While interviewing Gerarda, it was a privilege to meet Barney's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hezlyn Stocking, currently visiting from England. I later learned that all the Stockings originated in India, and that Barney is one of 15 children and a look-alike for the singer, Engelbert Humperdinck.

If Gerarda and Birney had their way, they would sponsor the whole family to come to the United States, which has been so good to them. They in turn are experiencing a success story that is still paved with perseverance and a lot of hard work.

One wishes they would pursue their idea for that Cornish pasties shop, because if you're ever in their bakery, ask them if they've made pasties that day. They're soooooooo delicious.

Gerarda puts the finishing touches on a cake with self-acquired expertise.

my seas, literally. She was in a plane crash on her way to spend a Christmas vacation with Barney, and was forced to swim the English Channel. Maybe this helped her to talk her husband into moving to California, where her parents were living, having themselves immigrated from England via Canada.

They only stayed a year, just long enough for their first child, Damian, eight, to be born in Oakland. Barney took a years leave of absence from his employer, Physics International, to return to England to earn his master's degree in physics at Brighton University in Sussex. While there, their second child, Rachel, was born.

They returned to the United States, still under the employment of Physics International. Their third child, Emily was born also in Oakland.

Feeling that the stability of his job depended too much on precarious times, Barney and Gerarda felt it would be wise if they invested their time and sav-

Freeze your peppers now

A good supply of bell peppers is appearing in markets and will continue through August with prices expected to drop as the peak season approaches This would be a good time for freezing or canning peppers.

To freeze peppers, select peppers with glossy skin, thick flesh, that are tender but crisp. They should be dark green or dark red.

Wash peppers well in cold water. Remove stems and seeds. Cut in halves or slices, or dice. Do not blanch peppers.

Pack in containers, leaving one half to one inch headspace for a solid pack. Seal, label and freeze.

Gardeners will soon be able to cultivate a community garden

LIVERMORE - Gardeners looking for a bit of land will be cheered to know they'll soon have a place to start their tomato seedlings and their winter squash.

The city's eagerly-awaited community gardens have finally found a home, on an unused plot of Livermore Area Recreation and Park District property off Murrieta Boulevard.

At Wednesday's public meeting, LARPD general manager Bill Payne announced the staff has narrowed the possibilities down to one, a two-acre site accessible from Olivina Avenue and running back toward East Stanley Boulevard.

The Rec District owns a large plot of land there, someday to become a neighborhood park, and will take a piece of it for the use of local residents who want to garden.

The plot will be fenced off and subdivided into generous family-sized garden sites which will be rented to local enthusiasts for a nominal fee.

A gardener will be able to keep the same plot, year after year, in order to condition the soil and continually improve it.

LARPD will provide a water supply and the Valley Ecology Center will probably be available with gardening advice.

A group of garden-lovers who started the push for a community garden are hoping their plots will be ready for winter planting. If not, availability by springtime is almost certain.

Residents of the Olivina Avenue neighborhood (and other interested citizens) are invited to a 7 p.m. meeting on Tuesday, July 29, on the property, to discuss LARPD's plans for both the gardens and the park.

The other site LARPD had been considering this summer was near Almond School (off East Avenue) on school district property. Many of the community gardens proponents live on that side of town. However, the area in question will probably be turfed, LARPD was advised in a recent letter.

Another site still under consideration, possibly for the future, is located at Green School in the Altamont area northeast of the city. The school is due to be turned into a warehouse in 1977.

Olivina Avenue stubble will bloom soon with new community garden

MESD schools will start on Sept. 4—if teachers agree

If the Murray Elementary School District teachers and board can ever come to some sort of salary agreement, school will begin on Sept. 4.

The new calendar calls for teacher work days — another bone of contention in negotiations — beginning Sept. 2, with children arriving two days later.

Negotiations are still at a standstill between the district and the teachers, with the last move being a teacher call for implementation of the fact-finding procedure.

Unfortunately, no agreement could be reached on the fact-finding procedure, much less any substantive issues, and nothing has happened since then.

However, Regina Paulus, chairperson of the Certificated Employes Council, has sent a letter to Superintendent Don Williams stating that she will contact Williams in the near future about the resumption of negotiations.

The two sides are deadlocked over the supply budget and also other seemingly unimportant issues to those not directly involved.

Rezoning before planners

Alameda County Bureau

A petition to reclassify 4.08 acres of land near the intersection of San Ramon Road and Dublin Boulevard from residential to commercial will come under the scrutiny of the Alameda County Planning Commission Monday at 1:30 p.m. in Hayward.

George Hansen wants to convert the property at the rear of 7212 San Ramon Road — about 500 feet north of Dublin Boulevard on the west side — to zoning that will allow retail business.

It is presently zoned for single family residences on 7,000 square foot lots.

The planners will also consider John Shuff's request to reclassify approximately 5 acres of a 54 acre site near the intersection of North Midway Road and Interstate 580 in the Altamont Pass area from agricultural to single family residential with a minimum building site of 5 acres.

Michelle Robert tops talent show

LIVERMORE - Michelle Robert won the talent show contest in the junior division and Ron Staggs captured the contest in the senior division during the Community Hour at Livermore's Day at the Alameda County Fair Monday.

Ron performed an organ solo and Michelle presented an act entitled "Exodus."

Center on its way

The entrance to the city's new Cultural Arts Center will be a cupola-like structure (shown above). The 3,200 square foot facility was designed by Jack Bras and is located on Black Avenue adjacent to the Aquatic Center. The center will cost more than $100,000 and should be completed by mid-October.

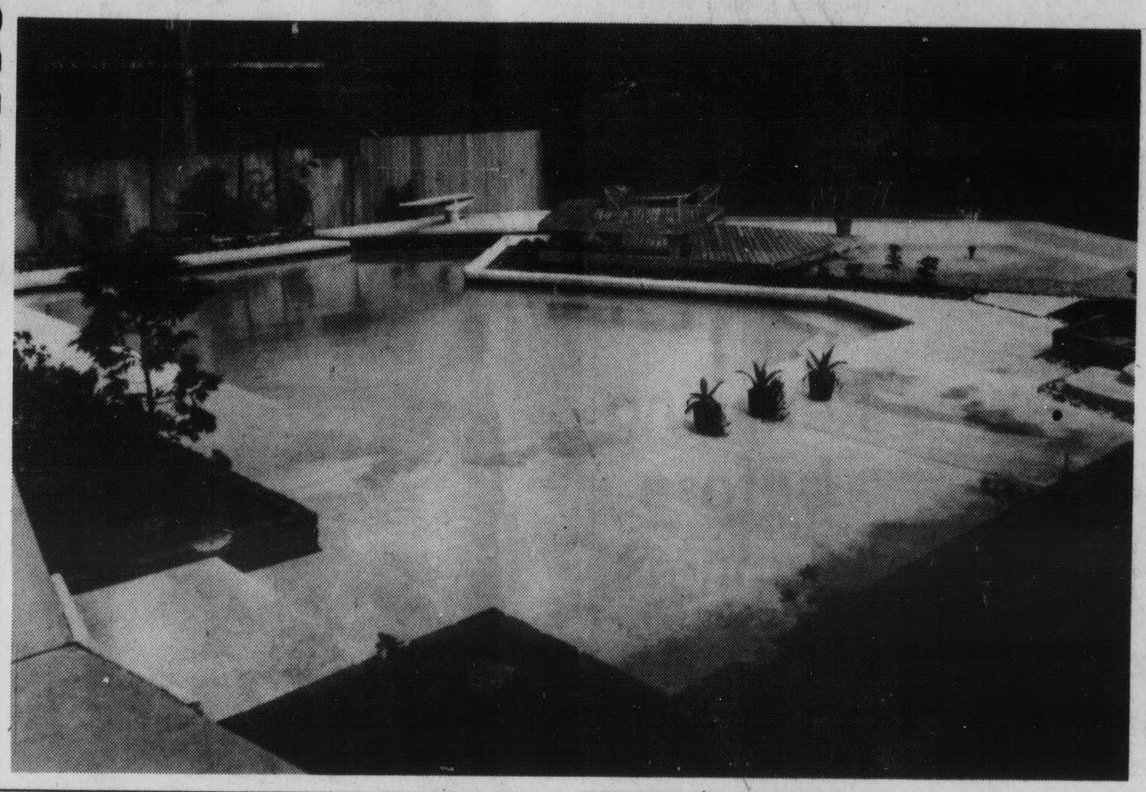
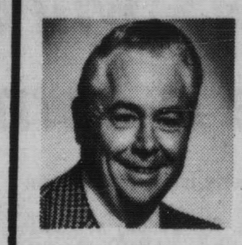
Interesting shapes

Think you have a strangely-shaped background? It can be an opportunityinstead o a problem. Many interesting designs can make your home look like a pool was built with it. Unique pools also allow that "personal" touch to accent your home.





Pooling ideas

by Bob Anglin

According to statistics, the majority of people moving into our area are either looking for a home with a pool, or want to install one later. For those planning a pool in the future, a few things should be kept in mind, so that costs and torn up yards can be kept to a minimum.

Most pool builders utilize tractors for excavation. These tractors are heavy, and need room for access. At least six feet in the clear between house and fence is required. In addition, the tractors steer like a tank, and require room to turn from the pool site, normally to the rear of a house, to go out to the front for loading a truck to take the dirt away.

If the homeowner has paved the access, chances are his paving will be cracked, if not destroyed. Even padding does not always prevent this. Paving can also block the utility lines which need to be installed from electric panels, gas meters, and hose bibs. For this reason, concrete walks and patios should usually be installed with the swim pool improvement or later.

Early consultation with a reliable pool builder or landscape planner can eliminate most of the headaches. One can also arrive at a yard plan they can develop as time, or money allows.

Most real estate people will agree that proper landscaping, including a well planned pool, can certainly enhance the desirability of a home for resale. Of course the enjoyment received by the family using the yard and possible pool, is probably more important.

New company

Joseph Concannon Jr. signs the contract appointing Stanford J. Wolf and Associates, Inc. as Concannon Vineyard's exclusive marketing representative effective August 1. Looking on is Jim Concannon, left, and Stanford J. Wolf, president of the new wine consulting and marketing company with offices in Menlo Park.

A beautiful pool

Pools come in many shapes and sizes, and an interesting pattern can complement the decor of your home. Your pool dealer can show you many different designs, or you can plan one yourself. Visit your local swimming pool contractor for ideas.

Outdoor school has 30 openings

The Wells Summer School Outdoor Education program has about 30 openings for the last two weeks of the summer session, Principal Ken Whipple reported.

The program, which involves field trips and is free of charge, runs from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. each school day, although some of the lengthier trips run until 4:30 p.m.

Entering sixth through eighth graders may sign up by calling the school or showing up at 8:30 at Wells.

Some of the field trips planned for the next two weeks are to Angel Island, the Berkeley Pier, Steinhardt Aquarium, the San Francisco Zoo, Martin's and San Gregorio beaches, the Lawrence Hall of Science and various East Bay Regional Park District parks.

Further information is available at 828-6227.

ERDA, Shell hope to jump output

The Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA) and the Shell Oil company announced a joint$7.3 million project to demonstrate additional oil recovery by an enhanced waterflooding teachnique.

Shell will flood 132 acres with 5,300 barrels a day of fresh water followed by a 1.5 year injection of a polymer slug(thickened water). At the end of the three year joint project approximately 500,000 barrels of additional oil are expected to be recovered.

Of this total, about 65,000 barrels should be due to the injection of the polymer instead of only water.

Shell's share of the project will amount to $5.2 million with ERDA picking up the rest of the tab.

EPA to fund revolutionary Striling engine for Ford

The Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA) announced that it will fund a Ford Motor Company study of the Striling engine, an automotive power system that has the potential for providing high fuel economy, low emissions, low noise and good acceleration.

The Striling engine differs from the internal combustion engine in that it is powered by heat from an external source. In a conventional engine, power is produced when a heated gas expands during combustion within a cylinder. In the Stirling engine, hydrogen gas within a cylinder expands when heated by an external burner, which can use a variety of fuels, including gasoline and diesel fuel.

In tests so far, the Stirling engine has shown several desirable qualities, however several problems have also cropped up. The cooling system must be quite large, the nickel-chrome alloy heater heads needed to contain the high-pressure diffusive hydrogen gas are expensive and power control systems need to be refined.

The $550,000 grant from ERDA to Ford will research into an 80-100 horsepower Stirling engine.

The idea for the engine was developed in 1816 by Scottish parson Robert Stirling but was overshadowed by the steam engine and the gasoline-powered internal combustion engine.

No interest by truckers in parking

LIVERMORE - Only two out of 100 truck owners canvassed by the city indicated they would be interested in a municipal parking lot for their rigs, according to City Manager Bill Parness.

Parness will report these results to the city council but said he does not expect it will go through with the proposed parking lot due to the poor response.

The council came up with the idea for a truck parking lot as one way to combat rigs left on county property along Portola Avenue and E. Stanley Boulevard.

Councilmembers were especially upset with the rows of rigs on Portola which greeted visitors coming into Livermore off I-580.

Formal letters protesting the illegal parking were sent by the city to Alameda County and the street appears to be cleared-up — for now.

The city contacted truck owners by placing questionnaires on the improperly parked vehicles.

Tight races close out Fairgrounds meet

A somewhat dubious dead heat at the finish of the featured 11th running of the $20,000 added Alamedan Handicap was the focal point of yesterday's final racing activity at the Alameda County Fairgrounds.

After a lengthy deliberation, the stewards declared the race, run in a track record-tying 1:48.3, a draw between favored Rtar of Kuwait and Scoreanwin, bringing roars of disapproval from a crowd which contributed a record $147,682 to the race's mutuel pool.

A case could have been made for either horse as a single winner.

Scoreanwin, which ran second behind front-running Carlos Villa most of the way, took the lead on the inside in the final yards and appeared, on the videotape replay, to have successfully held off a charge by Star of Kuwait.

However, in the finish line still shot, Star of Kuwait looked to have a possible advantage.

Seven-year-old Star of Kuwait paid $2.80 for his share of the win, while Scoreanwin returned $6.00. Both owners received $7,975 of the purse.

Another near-dead heat occurred in the final race of the meeting, the Pleasanton Stakes. But Victorian Image, ridden by Bill Mahorney, who also rode Star of Kuwait, was given the win by a nose over Mr. Machine, with Rudy Rosales up.

Victorian Image paid $6.20 in winning the last of four getaway day added money races.

A crowd of 15,435 was on hand for the Valley's last glimpse of racing this year, bringing to $122,688 the seasonal total. The average crowd of 10,224 was an improvement of 9.4 per cent over last year.

Partially attributed to mild weather, the larger crowds poured a 12-day total of $11,828,590 through the pari mutuel windows, and yesterday set a new record of $1,429,428 for a one-day handle.

The old mark of $1.3 million was set just eight days ago.

In the featured quarter horse router, the third running of the 870-yard Jack Robinson Handicap, Rocket Test, with James Riley aboard, charged up along the rail to nose out Rebel Charlie and Dorothy's Palleo, who photo-finished for second and third.

The high-weight favorite paid $4.20 in taking the lion's share on the $5,000 added purse.

The Appaloosa championship was decided in the day's second race, the Pleasanton Appaloosa Handicap at five furlongs.

Manitou Rock, a four-year-old son of Enviado — Sandy Rock, carried Dale Long at 123 pounds to a track record-equalling 58.4.

The Mancel Griggs-trained colt paid $5.60 to take home $2200 of the $4,000 added purse.

In previous days, odds-on such as Hollywood Import, Curly J, and bay area darling Bam's Penny failed to justify the public's faith, thus the meeting was, for better or worse, dominated by the jockeys.

The most obvious example was the tragic three-horse spill during last Saturday's running of the Sam Whiting Memorial Handicap, which took the life of leading winner Juan Gonzalez and left John Luckie with a badly broken leg.

Two other jockeys, John Wlburn and Bill Mahorney, were disciplined by the California Horse Racing Board after they fought wildly in front of the grandstand after the conclusion of that race. The melee began after Mahorney took issue with interference by Wilburn on the backstretch; their fisticuffs had nothing to do with the tragic spill.

Not all the mishaps on the fair circuit have been as morbid.

For the first week of the Pleasanton stop, Long was so star-crossed the results were almost humorous. But the humor was no doubt lost on Dale himself, who went on to become the second-leading quarterhorse and Appaloosa jockey.

On both the last day of the Solano County Fair at Vallejo, and the first day of the Alameda County meet, Long had his saddle slip out from under him during the running of a quarter horse race. Surprisingly, in the Solano race, the veteran rider managed to steer his mount to a track record with his right leg tucked underneath him.

The following day, Long was thrown to the track, fortunately escaping injury. And a day later, Dale met with more bad luck as his mount in the 12th race, Next Native, refused to leave the starting gate with the rest of the field. Though he was able to make up considerable ground, Next Native still finished last.

The Pleasanton meet's first Thursday was also eventful jockey-wise, as controversial Mary Bacon made her California debut

JC fast pitch features hurlers

They say the game of baseball is 90 per cent mental.

In men's organized softball, anyone will attest to the fact that pitching is 90 percent of the game.

Indeed it is. For instance, in this weekend's seventh annual Livermore Jaycee Softball Classic, pitching has been the center of attention.

The Classic, which got underway Friday evening, found favored Granucci's of Livermore defeating Cal-West Falcons of Fremont, 8-3.

Granucci's, the only team to have won this tournament twice, met the Cougars of San Leandro in last night's semi-final round.

In other first round pairings, Dan Harder's of Hayward, last year's runner-up, blanked Pizza Arcade of Livermore, 3-0. Channel Lumber of Livermore upset favored Bunyard Diesel of Hayward, 10-3.

Defending champion Straw Hat Pizza, also of Livermore, was beaten by San Rafael's Marin Wheel Align, 8-0. Incidentally, Marin possessed a four-year record of 136-9 prior to entering the Livermore tourney.

The Vikings of Mountain View, favored to win it all, beat Nicolette of Hollister, 5-3. Nicolette also entered with a phenomenal four-year mark, 173-27

In other games Friday night, Waterloo of Stockton edged Loyles A.C. of Hayward, 3-2. Potter's Pizza of Livermore shut out Jule J. Anisel of Fresno, 5-0. American Realty of Mountain View blanked Charlie Brown's, 4-0, and El Katrina Dairy of Turlock beat Noble's Concrete, 4-3.

McNamara and Pepe of Eureka won over Lee Ayres of Stockton.

Last night, in another important contest played at Max Baer Park, Don Harder's met the Livermore Cards.

Today's matchups include Marin Wheel vs. the Vikings at Livermore Rec at 8 a.m.; Waterloo and Lee Ayres at 10 a.m.; Pioneer Pizza vs. American Realty at noon.

This year's Classic will donate all profits to the John Conway Fund. A month ago, John was rescued from a near-drowning in May Nissen Pool, but remains comatose at Stanford Medical Center.

Another Cole leads Publinx

Even if Bobby Cole couldn't cut the mustard in the British Open, Tom Cole certainly could in yesterday's qualifying rounds for the Northern California Public Links Championship, held at Las Positas Golf Course yesterday.

While Bobby was faltering at Carnoustie, ex-Moreau High golfer Tom was leading a group of seven qualifiers yesterday at the Livermore links. The lanky 18-year-old fired nines of 36-36 to top a trio of golfers who finished at 75.

Cole and the remaining six qualifiers will compete in the Publinx finals, to be held August 2-3 at Spyglass Hill.

Four other golfers qualified to play in the Spyglass flight, open to players with handicaps of 11 and up.

Also in the group at 75 was hometown favorite Vic Wolfe, with nines of 37-38.

Tom McElahatton of Lake Chabot and Wally DeVe Jr. of Modesto also mastered the extremely windy Las Positas layout in three-over par 75.

Another Las Positas golfer, Ned Bellinger, earned a trip to Spyglass, as he checked in at 76. Walnut Creek's Ralph Huber matched Bellinger's effort, while Dave Bosley of Diablo Creek in Concord earned the last qualifying berth, finishing 18 holes at six-over par 78.

Sunol Valley's Don Perkins fired an outstanding 82, and with his 13 handicap finished with a net 69 to lead all qualifiers in the Spyglass flight.

Richard Holman of Las Positas carded an 88-19 — 69 to tie perkins for medalist honors.

Another Las Positas golfer, John Schacht, turned in a neat 88-16 — 72 to finish third in the qualifying, while Pearlie Baldwin of Adobe-Prunridge claimed the last qualifying berth with an 84-11 — 73.

Scarboro team 2nd in two-man

MONTEREY — Gene Scarboro of San Ramon Golf and Country Club, a 12-handicapper, combined with nine-handicapper Carlos Yrueta of Sequoyah CC for a 131, good for second place in this weekend's seventh annual Northern California Two-Man Best Ball Golf Championships, held at Spyglass Hill

Scarboro and Yrueta were three strokes in back of winners Harold Beaune of Stanford and Dick Brown of California CC, who got a boost when Beaune eagled the 15th hole on the final round.

Richard Berg and William Sullivan of Las Positas carded rounds of 71 and 69, for a 140 total. They were joined there by two other locals, Gayle Finch and Ray Machado, who shot 73-67.

At 142 were Terry Johnson and Al Difeo, also of Las Positas. Their finishing round 65 was the next lowest to the winners' 65-63.

Wright wins TOC sans hits

The Wright Air Red Sox of the Dublin Valley Little League couldn't get a hit off Mike Hegeman if the District 57 Championship depended on it.

Instead, they chose to let Hegeman bury himself, with a shovelful or two from his fielders.

Wright Air took advantage of five straight bases on balls to score two runs in the bottom of the second inning, then held on for a 2-1 victory and first place in the local Little League major tourney.

The opposing Straw Hat Giants of the South Danville league began the scoring with a run in the top of the first, as Greg Wheeler tripled with a man on.

But in the second, Wright Air's Todd Fraser walked with one out. He stole second, advanced to third on the catcher's overthrow, and came home as centerfielder Bill Deitsch threw wide of the plate.

Consecutive walks to Toby Macfarlane, Tim Larin, Steve Marsh and Ron Stettler produced the winning run, and a double play got Hegeman out of the inning.

Wolves resist Cal Hi

California High pulled itself back from a sluggish first half to scare San Ramon, but eventually lost in summer league basketball, 43-36.

The Grizzlies trailed by nine pohnts at halftime, then out-scored the Wolves, 16-11 in the third quarter. Cal entered the fourth period down by four, but couldn't sustain the comeback momentum.

Cal's Larry Walters tied Dave Tricaso of San Ramon for scoring honors with 10 points. Brad Blake and Ed Aitken of the Wolves both scored nine.

In other action, Amador Valley blasted Dublin, 64-38, paced by Rob Yackley's 14 points and seven rebounds. Teammate Mike Hill contributed 13 points.

For Dublin, Jim Boulware, Mike Harris and Kory Porter all had six points.

College Park defeated Albany, 61-52, despite Tony Garth's 22 points for the Cougars.

Chubb romps

Four singles and an error enabled Pat Nagburg to score in the eighth inning as Rich Ruckley nosed out the Centerfolds, 5-4, in Livermore Women's Softball.

The winners loaded the bases in the top of the eighth after scoring the go-ahead run, but failed to score.

That left it to pitcher Ursula Rossetta to set the Centerfolds down in order in the last of the eighth inning.

Rossetta, Nagburg, Cindy Shawk, Lucy Way, Nancy Battles and Bonnie Briges all had two hits for the winners.

The Centerfolds' Anita Griffin went 3-for-4.

Misplaced college in Hayward's hills

Those who fought mightily to bring that campus onto an attractive stretch of valley soil 20 years ago can be forgiven a touch of "I told you so" on the plight of that institution which now rests uncertainly on the hills above Hayward.

Reports that "declining enrollment" might compel closing down Cal State University at Hayward are of course indicative of the total state pattern which now produces far less students than anyone had predicted. But it is in that explanation which notes that "Cal State at Hayward must compete with established schools at San Jose and in San Francisco" where this valley might gloat, and taxpayers might weep.

When the final choice for that South County campus narrowed down to 300 flat acres in Pleasanton (the Pleasanton Valley subdivision of today) and the wind-blown rock pile above Hayward, the key argument centered around the relative "attendance areas" of those two locations.

The Pleasanton team argued that this valley would be central "to much of Contra Costa County, half of San Joaquin, parts of San Mateo and Santa Clara counties in addition to Alameda County." It was a big circle, but one that top state authorities agreed would be necessary "to justify an investment of this magnitude."

Hayward's forces reasoned that the booming South County demanded "a commuter college" of its very own, and "a remote site in Pleasanton" would "not be accessible" to that Hayward urban hub. And so the political decision went to Hayward, even while logic was on the valley's side.

A dozen years and tens of millions of dollars later, the valley argument is being supported by the facts of that attendance pattern. Cal State at Hayward was never an attractive campus; now it may become an abandoned one.

Hindsight might dictate that Pleasanton and the valley are better off for not having won such a large educational center with its related commuter problems. But the State of California and all taxpayers are paying a terrible price for the last-minute intervention of Governor Pat Brown on behalf of his Democratic cohorts in Hayward.

Water fee insanity

That old line which suggests "the inmates have taken control of the asylum" has found special application in the matter of City of Pleasanton vs. Zone 7 in the determination of fair and equitable connection fees.

The long, almost unbelieveable tale began three years ago when Pleasanton city staff decided "in order to improve the water pressure in some older and more remote sections of town" to start installing "a modified ⅝ inch meter." That device costs the same as the "standard ⅝ inch meter" but "allows a steadier level of pressure" while "delivering no more water." In all of this we quote Alan Campbell, the city's director of public works.

What followed that apparently honest, and even enlightened act of public service is difficult to believe. The city "in order to raise our own connection fees" started to charge out those "modified ⅝ inch meters" at the rate assigned the ¾ inch regulator. At the same time — because Pleasanton serves as agent for Zone 7 — the city also collected the higher $675 fee for Zone 7, $225 more than the district's charge for a standard residential meter.

Last November the Zone 7 board opted to increase all of its connection fees. The charge for a ⅝ inch meter went to $650, and the ¾ inch connection jumped to $975. It was then Campbell realized "Pleasanton customers would be paying $325 more per connection for the same service" provided Livermore and Dublin residents. The city reacted by filing a claim with Zone 7 for the "$190,000 overpayment" collected by the city and forwarded to Zone 7 from 1972 through 1974. "Every home owner in the Zone is getting the same service, using essentially the same amount of water, and therpforp should bp paying the same fee," Campbell contends. That seems reasonable enough, even if the reasoning came a little late.

Zone 7's board of directors not only doesn't agree with that logic, but insists that "the larger meter" which was also installed by the city in routine replacement (and to improve service) constitutes an accumulated penalty now due the district of $250,000 (the difference between the Zone's $650 charge for the standardresidential meter and the $975 now levied for the ¾ inch size.)

Forgetting for the moment some very bad bookkeeping on the part of Pleasanton's staff, and some startling dogmatism on the part of the Zone 7 board, the net result of all this foolishness is that a typical Pleasanton home owner, with the standard inventory of appliances, children and garden, is being asked to pay $325 more for the same installation offered that "typical home owner" elsewhere throughout the valley. That is not only unfair, it is illegal.

To further complicate the whole business, the " modified 5/8" meter now being used by Pleasanton might soon become the standard for all single family residential connections, and is in fact used extensively in Contra Costa and Santa Clara counties.

Pleasanton contends that Zone 7's meter-based fee schedule is "not realistic" and therefore unfair. The city wants the district to charge a flat per-residence water connection fee, just as the Zone applies its storm drainage schedule. That seems reasonable. But, for reasons not clear, the Zone's board of directors declines to consider any such change, refuses to adjust in deference to the obvious inequity within its district, and is even talking of "going to court if necessary if Pleasanton refused to pay that $250,000." (It is more unclear why Robert Pearson, elected from Pleasanton to that board, is leading the fight to penalize the people of Pleasanton — for an error that occured during his term as mayor of that city.

And so, once again, a matter that cries out for local logic, heads for some distant court in search of an answer.

Fair: Smash success

I have not been to a Fair that has exhibited so many different categories, so well and with so much general appeal as the Fair that concludes today in Pleasanton.

We wrote in this column last Sunday that we would be going through the Fair with a very critical eye, after two previous visits in a relaxed mood.

Aside from very minor security infractions, i.e. kids hopping the fences to get in free and potentially lethal weapons sticking out of pockets, we neither saw or heard of anyone being "ripped off" or badgered by persons manning any of the exhibit or carnival booths.

Their were also the usual incidents in the track area, but nothing that will cause the Fair Association Board of Directors to lose sleep over....save the tragic death of jockey Juan Gonzalez and a brawl between two jocks in front of the grandstand.

One event, however, should be mentioned....the community barbecues.

The weather was excellent for ALL of the community events this time, unlike last year when the Livermore chamber people had to flee to indoor accomodations.

But there's a rift developing involving the Fair management, its concessionaire and at least one group (Pleasanton). Some people at the Pleasanton barbecue held Wednesday were less than pleased with the preparation of the food, the portions and the bar tending.

Even though the weather was far better this time and just as much advance publicity (if not more) given, the crowd count was down from 600 to 400.

There is some dispute as to whether Livermore and Hayward, to name just two, prepared their "own" barbecues (both food and drink) while Pleasanton went along with the concessionaire (Peluso) as told.

Our personal opinion, which is shared by others we have talked to, is that the Pleasanton affair would have been better if steaks (ala Livermore) and-or hamburgers were part of the fare. The mixed drinks were questionable, the chicken lukewarm and portions generally small. We believe that if chamber-designated people were handling the chef and mixology chores, it could have been better.

The chamber might also inveigle the Fair people into having the strolling musicians walk through the barbecue area to perk things up. During our 1½ hours in the area, there was a paucity of community togetherness, entertainment or announcements concerning chamber, city or fair events. We got the feeling we had just gone through a package tour cafeteria line. Impersonal and bland.

I will not belabor the subject as there are just too many "good" points to Pleasanton's part in the Fair, and the total Fair.

We managed to see all of the Amphitheatre acts except Guy and Ralna. The audiences were very receptive to all, especially the Tony Urbano Marionettes. To our thinking, this act was far and away the most entertaining for all. We hope the Fair will bring them back next year.

The Young California Building made an impressive debut, thanks to hundreds of 4-H'ers and other youth groups. Though the exhibits tend to be dwarfed in this huge building, they were nonetheless impressive.

Unfortunately, many fair-goers missed the antique agriculture machinery exhibit because of where it was placed.

The "new" carnival area is a vast improvement. There seemed to be less congestion even though the Young California Building took up part of what used to be carnival area.

The floriculture, art works and arts and crafts exhibits drew a steady flow of people every day. Along with the livestock, they are the backbone of the Fair.

Not only were these exhibits all enjoyable, but we managed to stay away from the corn dog and frosty booths on our "critical eye" trips through the Fair.

Now that's discipline!

Letter to The Times

Teaching patriotism

Editor, The Times:

I am not qualified to define "Fundamentalism" with reference to schools, but I am qualified to say what it is about present schools that I don't like. I don't like the way they handle (1) the purpose of education (2) patriotism and (3) values.

(1) THE PURPOSE OF EDUCATION. I think schools have turned their priorities around from what they used to be, and what they should be. The only way I can think of to explain what I mean is to quote a question for students which appears in the teachers' manual for "Values Clarification." The question reads: "Which is most important" (a) to work hard for your future? (b) to love others? (c) to really know yourself?"

This seemingly innoculus little question is loaded with dynamite. I believe that most parents would say that the purpose of education, and the top priority for students, should be to work hard to prepare for their futures. I also believe that educators have turned that priority upside down, and the teaching emphasis is now on learning to love others, and getting to really know oneself, with preparing for the future on the bottom. This is not something I've just made up out of my head — current literature on education is full of talk espousing just such emphasis. The theory seems to be that Man is in the throes of several revolutions so deep that they render obsolete the fundamental attitudes and traditional education, and that therefore the emphasis of education should be on traditional education, and that therefore the emphasis of education should be on what type of person the student should be. I believe that this theory is being taught in our teacher-training colleges. Parents have been demanding a return to emphasis on the basics for years, with no results. Maybe the teachers don't know how because that's not the way they were trained. Not only do many (most?) teachers share this upside down priority, but I believe they are influencing the students toward the same beliefs. (Certainly this is true in colleges. Read Charles Reich's "Greening of America," the section on Consciousness III, and you'll see what I mean.)

(2) PATRIOTISM. I believe that many teachers not only are not teaching patriotism, but are actually undermining the love of country which is natural to their students. Not only that, but apparently there are a lot of people who don't understand what parents mean when they say "Teach our children to be patriotic."

Well, instead of using the word "patriotism," let's substitute "national spirit." And what I mean when I say "Teach the students to be patriotic" is that teachers should treat "national spirit" the same way they do "school spirit." Every teacher knows the importance of school spirit, for if the student is to have a positive attitude toward his education, he must have a positive attitude toward his school. So teachers at all times emphasize these aspects of the school, and willingly lead rallies, discussions and activities designed to influence the students toward a positive, loyal, indeed chauvinistic, attitude toward the school. Yet some of the same teachers who enthusiastically participate in Rah Rah school stuff get all upright and scream "Jingoism" when someone says "Teach our children to be patriotic." This teacher attention to school spirit does not mean that criticism of the school is not permitted, but never would any teacher engage in or permit constant emphasis on the negative.

It is my opinion that grave damage is being done to our "national spirit," especially among the young, and that a major part of that damage is being done in our schools, not only by undue emphasis on what is wrong with this country, but also by a contemptuous attitude toward patriotism.

round the town

One thought is firm as a journalist approaches the quarter-century mark of servitude on this valley scene.... A fella accumulates a helluva lot more questions than answers.

Why doesn't this job ever get any easier? There's a question for you. But since it probably applies to almost every other pursuit in this workaday world, I don't expect any inspired responses to that one, either.

Does the Cher Bono-Gregg Allman breakup represent the shortest navel engagement in history? No one has really asked me that one, yet, but it makes for scintilating copy.

How come Americans spell so funny? I keep asking myself that, every time I approach a word like "honor" ... which my Canadian heritage savs cm comes with a "u" ... as in "labour." I have finally overcome that added "u", but not the "z" ... as in "civilization." South of the 49th parallel, the "z" becomes "s" ... as with "exercise" ... but NOT with "criticize" ... which only flips over for "criticism."

The biggest problem has been "defense" ... or is it "defence"? I have all my copy proof read twice by Yankees on the staff who never travelled beyond Yreka. That way we keep the California flavour to all of our compositions.

When is a "huse" a "howse"? All I know is that whenever I approach one of same, some listening-in Yank will say ..."Ah HAH! A bloody Englishman in our midst, what?" I have trained myself to say "dwelling", "abode" and even "car port" rather than "garage." It is simpler than starting the War of 1812 all over again.

We may have to start another war in order to convert Australia. Their spelling is about the most un-American thing since Gracie Fields. I couldn't begin to explain the sign at every busy corner in Sydney which cautions you not to jump into traffic. We stood so long to trying to figure the message that we missed the light change, almost got clobbered by a tough kid on a bicycle.

"Watch it luv!" he bellowed as he slipped by in fifth gear. To which another shook pedestrian responded. — "Some cheek!" Two New York longshoremen could never have said it better.

Question: "Why does a tourist cross the road, in Yosemite Valley, that is?" Answer: To avoid the bears. Which are raising hell with the visitors. Or vice versa. Anyway, it's a real problem.

The National Park Service has launched "an overall bear management program" this year. It is actually aimed less at managing the beasts, than it is the people. Humans are being trained how to react, when to run, when to head for high country — like a tall tree.

"Park visitors have to be made aware that the bears of Yosemite live in a natural state and should eat natural foods." No mention if humans are considered part of the bear's natural diet. But that will be part of the training anyway, you can bet.

They are printing a book on the subject. "The Care and Handling of People vis-a-vis Bears." It promises to be a best seller.

We encountered one of the big, brown fellas on a recent trip to the High Country. He was friendly enough, but left little doubt we were the intruders, and this was his home base. It was also his garbage can, which he proceeded to clean out. The family was fascinated. Not so the lady behind the camp stove.

"What are we going to do?" she demanded, long steak fork in hand.

"Turn the steaks before they burn, that's what," I replied. It was one of my more brilliant responses. She laughs about it now. Gave me a terrible dirty look at the time, however. She's not much with bears. Besides, we didn't have the book.

One of my older brothers (they were ALL older, and meaner, as I recall) used to shoot bears for a living. The job didn't really start out that way. He followed the gold mine trail into Northern Saskatchewan. When winter set in, the work closed down. Just a small caretaker crew was retained. Brother needed the job, bad. "Don't you have ANYTHING I can do to stick around here?" he pleaded. They decided to shut him up. "You can stay as Camp Watch if you like." Turned out the big thing to watch out for was marauding bears. They'd invade the camp, raise particular hell.

Brother had to shoot 'em, which he thought was great sport. He also learned that he had to bury the dead beasts. Which wasn't nearly as much fun. Threw out his back trying to dig a grave for one very large bear carcass. Laid him out for a month. He wishes now he had read the book.

"Is your wife really an ogre?" Been getting quite a few questions like that lately. Mostly from men, or loving old ladies. People who have gone through the frozen food bit, and can sympathize with the victim. The other day we were introduced to a local pair who have been following this column.

"You don't look nearly as bad as I thought," the lady said to my spouse. She quickly added that "I meant in just the way you treat him, of course." But the damage had already been done. More than just the dinner was frozen that night, I can tell you.

Sound and Fury

Walt Hecox

Mexican troops in close fitting olive drab, trousers tucked into knee high boots and rifles ready to combat a danger which seemed to have passed in the night, patrolled the highway between Puerto Vallarta and Mismaloya.

For almost a mile the road had been reduced to one lane, and that only recently opened by overworked bulldozers, by a passing storm.

I thought about the road for a flickering fraction of a second while I waited for the red light to ignite which would tell me the strobe was functioning.

Had the highway not been opened I might have been safe in the sunlight on the patio by the pool, high on the flat roof of the Oceano Hotel, sipping a dabble of tequila and lime and absorbing the tropical sunlight.

The highway was not closed so instead of being anything close to safe I was poised over the ledge of a spiny reef maybe a hundred feet from the mushroom shaped middle island of Los Arcos staring eyeball to eyeball it seemed into the angry face of an outraged moray eel.

The thought of the highway occupied only a fleeting second in a stream of kaleidoscope which raced through my mind during the endless few seconds which passed before the strobe was activated and I could push the lever and take a picture of that resentful and overly toothy animal which was lying coiled on the ledge, neck arched and mouth wide open, about four feet below my waiting camera.

A man could not blame the moray, a member of a breed which has recently acquired a reputation for docility which appeared, at that critical moment in my life, to have been somewhat exaggerated.

He had been swimming by himself when I spotted him, bright green and something more than six feet long, a splendid specimen whose photograph would replace that partial shot of a sleeping monster I had taken at almost the same location a year earlier.

The strobe, of course caused the problem. Throughout the morning it had been stubborn, an obstinate electronic burden which had already let half a dozen good pictures escape on fast flying wings.

When the moray appeared I was careful, following within the four to seven foot range the camera, at its chosen setting, would allow. I watched the light and waited, remembering the documentary television show in which men had been shown feeding friendly morays.

Remembering too the stories of how some men had lost fingers, hands, feet, parts of arms and legs and sometimes their lives when a hungry and improperly educated moray had decided to make a meal of at least a portion of a homo sapien, sinking those razor sharp teeth which slant back like barbs in a fishook into flesh and bone and ripping away its meal with one gargantuan bite.

Believe me, I wanted the photograph.

The diving was not all it has been in the past at Los Arcos this summer, partly because Pedro Rodriguez, the Mexican diving man with gills where most folks carry their lungs, was otherwise occupied and could not escort us to those secret places on the bottom he knows so well.

The absence of Pedro was not all which plagued us. A hurricane had passed off shore a few days before we arrived and left its aftermath of storms and troubled waters which forced us to fight a strong wash which does not exist in ordinary times and to swim through the muck carried into the water by the roaring river at Mismaloya which is a gentle stream on ordinary days.

Of course we had enjoyed our share of scenery. The diving at Mismaloya on a bad day is better than anywhere else on the Pacific Coast under the best of conditions.

The photograph of a king sized octopus, the largest I have ever seen in the wild, was already in my camera bag and waiting development. The picture had not been quite what I wanted. He was huddled close to his cave and I had taken his picture twice, once from the rear and once in front with those protuding eyes staring directly at the camera.

By the size of his body I could tell his tentacles would be at least a spectacular two inches thick and when I proded him with a rock and he moved my estimate proved to be correct.

The trouble was that when the big fellow moved I had a rock in my hand instead of the camera so those big tentacles were photographed in my memory and available only to my vision. He was gone, deep in his cave, in a fragment of a second and not even this old man is foolish enough to follow an octopus, no matter how timid, into his lair.

The photograph of the ray, flying on graceful wings over the ocean floor at about 70 feet beneath the surface might have been good, the strobe seemed to have homed in, but a man can never be sure when he is wing shooting at high underwater speeds.

There were other shots, parrot fish and groupers, angel fish and the big, lazy loafers who lounge on the bottom.

The moray, of course, was special. I had taken a picture of about a six foot sea snake the day before but found the camera had been jolted to a bad setting when I surface. Only good fortune of a very special kind would get me a photograph.

The moray did not like being followed. He swam for maybe 20 feet, then settled himself into three long, flat coils on the ledge of the reef, opened his mouth and dared me to advance.

I hovered above the shelf wondering if the wash would take me into those big jaws, whether and when morays struck and when the strobe would light.

Eventually, of course, the strobe did activate and the bright light as I had hoped, washed over that green body and frightened the sea monster into retreat.

I'll know soon if I got the photograph of my life.

I know folks. It's not a wise way to take a vacation. But it beats hell out of a rocking chair, with or without wheat squeezings.

A skilled hand

A popular daily feature of the County Fair is the Art in Action program in the art exhibit area. Exhibits and demonstrations are held daily starting at 12 noon. Here, Dick Murphy sketches Bill Sala Jr. in charcoal.

'High Noon' at Sunol

While agitated spectators cowered in the shadows the feared "Yankee Flat Raiders" from Livermore (in real life, members of the Livermore Jaycees) shot it out and not a man was alive when the gunplay ended. In the picture are Tony Kuret and Hardy Dean, but the photographer, poltroon that he is, was so terrified he forgot to get the name of the third outlaw. They brag that they specialize in claim jumping, horse stealing, card cheating and shooting up saloons. The occasion was "Bunker Hill Day" at Sunol Regional Wilderness and the photo was taken by Monte Monteagle of East Bay Regional Park District.

Mission collision

Faintly resembling the freeway at rush hour, these two bumper car jockeys maneuver their vehicles about the grid at the Foley and Burk carnival holding forth at the Fair. Carnival, with all its daredevil rides, games of skill and pungent odors, continues through today.

SALMON
OVER CHARCOAL

Salt & Pepper — 1 Small Onion
1 Whole Lemon — Parsley Sprigs

One 5 to 8 LB Salmon: Sprinkle cavity with Salt and Pepper . . . Tuck inside 1 sliced lemon and onion, and handful of Parsley Sprigs. Wrap fish heavily in foil. Place fish with foil stem up about 6 inches from firebed over glowing coals of 30 long burning briquets. Turn fish every 10 minutes. After 30 minutes open seam on top and test for doneness by cutting slit into thickest part of fish with sharp knife. When done, the meat is firm, and looks lighter in color and less translucent. If necessary reseal foil, continue turning and checking doneness every 5 minutes. Serve plain or with dill sauce. Makes 8 to 12 servings.
